

Gas Line Repair Ballard WA Salish Plumbing Co Licensed Gas Plumber

Gas line work requires a licensed plumber, and in Seattle the permit and inspection requirements are enforced through the Seattle Department of Construction and Inspections. Salish Plumbing Co is licensed for gas line repair and installation throughout the Ballard area and handles everything from repairing a corroded gas fitting to running a new branch line for a range, outdoor grill, or fireplace. Owner Dustin Williams and his team carry current Washington state plumbing certification and pull the required permits for all gas work. The most common gas line calls in Ballard involve aging flexible connectors on gas ranges and dryers that have developed small leaks, corroded shutoff valves that need replacement, and homeowners adding gas appliances during kitchen renovations. In older Ballard homes, black iron gas piping from original construction is generally still serviceable, but fittings and connections that have not been disturbed in decades sometimes need attention when work is done nearby. Salish assesses the condition of Plumber Ballard wa the entire line when making a repair rather than fixing only the immediate problem.

New gas line runs are common when Ballard homeowners remodel kitchens or finish basements, and Salish handles these as part of the broader plumbing scope for the project. The line is sized appropriately for the appliances it will serve, routed safely through the structure, and tested before the inspector arrives. Salish coordinates the inspection timing with the city to keep remodel projects on schedule. Salish Plumbing Co | Shoreline, WA | (206) 867-0624 If you suspect a gas leak, leave the house, do not use any electrical switches, and call the gas company first. Once the leak has been made safe by the utility, call Salish Plumbing Co to locate and repair the source.
